

Compiled and Interpreted

The difference is when your mistakes are found.

COMPILED — Java

A typo or a type mistake stops you HERE — before the program has run, and before any user sees it.

INTERPRETED — JavaScript

The same mistake is not found until the line actually runs — which may be in front of a user.

Compiling buys safety and costs a step. Interpreting buys speed of trying things and costs late surprises. Neither is the winner.